'Books are Better than Films at Teaching Creativity and Intelligence'

(Cressida Cowell)

The new children's laureate and 'How to Train Your Dragon' author has produced a 'giant-to-do-list':

Each week, we will focus on work undertaken by a different class. This week, it is the turn of 6L. What a wonderful start to the new school year, 6L have settled in very well and have hit the ground running - literally - in our PE lessons with Miss Cooper! We became digital detectives during our internet safety week and all became more aware of our own digital footprints. We have started our "Is The World Fair?" learning challenge, in which we are studying World War 2.

On Monday this week, Year 5 experienced a Victorian school day! Children (and teachers) dressed up for the part and everyone fully participated, even though some of the children were a tiny bit afraid of their new teachers! The children had to stand up and chant all their multiplication facts which made them very tired, as they are not used to standing up for long periods of time. Also, every time an adult came into the class, the children had to stand up. The children took part in several Victorian activities, which included writing on chalk boards, writing with ink and quills, sewing and eating lumpy cold porridge out of their hands!! We had a great time and not only did the children enjoy their day, they learned lots of interesting facts that will support them in their learning about Victorian times.
